It is evident that in Deli, these society quarrels are fought out in secret. It is quite possible that they seem to come to an end, because they are no longer carried on in public. The thanks of the Queen-Empress have been t-ansmitted by the Private Secretary to the Victory for a copy of a remarkable brochure written by Mr. K. Raghanathji, on "The Jubilee Language." THE MOSLEMS OF BRITISH INDIA

AN INTERVIEW WITH SIR SALAR JUNG. K.C.I.F., LATE MINISTER OF HYDERABAD. The recent extraordinary proceedings of the

Maharaja Dhul ep Singh in his new character of protegé of M. Katkow have attracted an amount of attention out of all proportion to their political eignificance. At the same time we thought it would be interesting to obtain the opinion of his countryman, Sir Salar Jung, as to the possibility of any resultant complications in India. Our readers will bear in mind that Sir Salar Jung, son of the late Sir Salar to the British Government at the time of by every Englishman, under whose able administration the great province of Hyderabad made such a rapid development during the last quarter of a country is not only a Mahomedan noble of great wealth and position, but since the death very reliable opinion, not merely by reason of his wide experience as a Minister, but also because, being one of the most prominent Mahomedan nobles of India, no one is more competent to express the views generally of the fifty millions of his Mahomedan co-religionists, who are, by far, the most warlike portion of the native races. In reply to our query, did he attach any political importance to the attitude of Dhulcop

Singh, Sir Salar relied :--"None whatever; Dhuleep Singh has been on the bounty of Her Majesty's Government. Mr. Thomas Baring has been returned un. Being over head and ears in debt he thinks

In short Dhuleep Singh is up for sale to the highest bidder; but the British Government, knowing what his position is in India, is not likely to be a bidder at all. "I never understood that such a sentiment. and all the responsibility that such a sentiment involves, was seriously questioned either here or in England. Certainly, the old and close alliance. between our great Queen, the Head of our State and his Imperial Majesty, who is the head of our Church, has distinctly added to our contentment and our happiness in being the subjects of Great Britain. In addition to a beneficent and enlightened rule founded on justice and good faith, we have always recognised that because we were allied to Great Britain, that therefore we secured to the faithful here an invaluable political buttress in the event of foreign aggression. And no English statesmen will ever be permitted by English public opinion to destroy such a structure, which derives it trength, on the one hand, from a natural belief in the resources of England, and, on the other hand, from a religious faith which is ever looking westward to the shrine of St Sofia. Clearly here is a sufficient reason why England can never allow any nation to make a violent entry into Constantinople. To do so would be to wish the alienation of the sympathy and affection of the most warlike of the races of India, the very races upon whose zeal England later may have to rely in order to control the too progressive tendency of Russia eastward. The absurdity of any such policy does not require even to be discussed seriously. Then the opinion of the enlightened in India is that we need not expect to see any new mapping out of Europe

"That is certainly our view. At least that no new maps will be made by the forces of war, though possibly in the interests of peace I-can imagine that the incessant burden of these great military preparations on the Bosphorus may be felt as a painful strain on the resources of Turkey, and that therefore the Porte might invite Austria with further guarantee of the Great Powers to an intimate cooperation with her in order to render this beautiful region secure against the northern encroachment which always threatens it. Any such arrangement would certainly be for the bonefit both of the Porte and of Austria, and would be gladly accepted by nearly all of the Great Powers of Europe as it would make Turkey irresistibly strong to defend this position, and would thus secure the peace both of Eastern Europe and also of Asia.'

The Nawab proceeded to develops this idea in more precise detail. Into these particulars it would searcely be opportune to follow his Ex-cellency. The foregoing sufficiently indicates with what jealous regard the Moslems of British India desire the maintenance of the Ottoman Power in Europe, and what are the political buttresses which they deem most apt for its support.—Levant Herald.

A traveller in Persia relates that while on a visit to a Judge a man was brought in who stoutly denied the offence with which he was charged. The Judge fixed his eyes on the prisoner, who had stretched forward one of his fingers, and exclaimed: "You are guilty!" "By thy venerable head I vow Tam not guilty!" protested the accused, now raising two fingers. This process was continued until he at last stretched out five fingers of each band when the magistrate remarked: "Good, let him go: he is' innocent." The traveller learned afterward that by raising his finger the prisoner meant the Judge to understand that he offered one tonan (about 10s.) for his release, and had been compelled to raise the amount by successive bids to ten tonans (£5) in order to satisfy the demands of Persian justice.
